

Deadline: 2017-11-20

3 assistant professor positions in: development / public economics / empirical IO

Description:

The Department of Economics at Sciences Po invites applications for 3 junior positions (assistant professor, tenure-track) in development, public economics and empirical IO, starting September 1, 2018. Candidates are offered a competitive salary package and a light teaching load. Applications from candidates from any country and background are welcome. English is the Department's working language (for teaching as well) and knowledge of French is not required. Interviews will be conducted at the ASSA meetings in Philadelphia in January 2018.

Application Instructions:

Candidates should have a Ph.D. in hand or firmly expected by August 2018 and should show promise or significant scholarship and teaching ability. A completed application will include a cover letter, a CV, a copy of important publications or working papers, evidence of teaching performance (if available), and should arrange for the submission of three letters of recommendation. Complete applications should be received by November 20th 2017 to be guaranteed full consideration. All candidates must apply through the online application of EconJobMarket.org.

Online Application URL: <https://econjobmarket.org/postings.php>

Department of economics website: <http://econ.sciences-po.fr/>

For more information email to: econ.recruit@sciencespo.fr